Locating Resources

This directory consists of the resources used most frequently by families. It is not a comprehensive list of all services in Westmoreland County and, like all resource directories, it will quickly be out-of-date. Because of this, the first section is to help you find the services to best suit your needs.

Identifying the Need

Too often we limit ourselves by identifying one solution of a problem as being what we need instead of identifying the need and looking for all available options. For example, when we find ourselves with rent and utility costs that are just too high for our budget, Section 8 Housing, where we should only pay a percentage of our income for shelter costs, is a nice "solution." If we identify that solution as our need, we eliminate other resources such as Weatherization, Low Income Energy Assistance Program, independent low income housing units, Consumer Credit Counseling, etc. Our real need is to find a way or ways to lower our shelter costs.

Listing Resources

Once the need is identified, the next step is to identify all the places we can call for information. In this book, the agencies are grouped by general need categories. Also, most phone books now have a section of "blue pages" which list human services programs and government agencies. Be careful, though, as some agencies are not listed by their common name. So when you're looking for a particular agency and can't find it right away in the phone book, try looking under different titles. Many programs are listed under Westmoreland County, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania or United States. If you are having trouble finding the number for a particular agency, or just don't know where to start, you might want to try PA 2-1-1 or call toll-free at 1-800-753-8827. Tell them what the problem/need is and they will help direct you to the appropriate services.
Calling for Information

When you have your list together, the next step is to start calling for information. It is helpful to list all the things you want to find out before you call. You will want to know:

- What type of service is offered?
- What are the eligibility requirements?
- Are there any fees?
- What are the days and hours of service?
- How do you apply?

Always remember to ask their name when you talk to someone at an agency. If they don't offer the service you're looking for, tell them what type of service you want. They may be able to suggest another place. Don't stop after one phone call. You want to find as many options as possible so you can choose what suits your family best. Don't assume you know about a program from your previous involvement with them or by talking to someone who has received services from that program. Collect all your information yourself directly from the program. Agencies are constantly reorganizing and changing the focus of programs in response to federal rules, regulations, budget changes and community needs. The program you knew before may not operate the same now. Also, when you call a program you should be prepared to tell them where you live, how many are in your family, what is the source of your income and how much income you receive per month or year.

Evaluating Information

After you have collected all the information possible, you need to evaluate each program according to how it meets your family's needs. You will want to consider the following when evaluating:

- Do you qualify?
- How much will it cost you?
- Is there a waiting list? How long?
- Could you use this type of service?

Then based on your evaluation of each program, you will select the program(s) that best suit your needs. Sometimes, because of long waiting lists, you will want to choose more than one program.
Applying to Programs

Once you have selected the program(s) that suit your needs, you will need to apply. If you did your initial search by these suggestions, you will already know how to apply. You may need to call back if you don't have all the needed information. Some programs do applications over the phone or online, others mail them out and still others require you to go to their office to apply. The things you need to know in order to apply include:

What is the application process? (Phone, mail, online or in person)
What information will you need to provide? (Proof of income, social security numbers, birth certificates, copies of rent receipts or utility bills, etc.)
If you must go somewhere to apply, where do you go and whom do you see there?
Also, what exactly should you bring with you?
What are the days and hours the agency is open for applications?

Get all the information you can before you start out so that you can plan your trip. Nothing is more frustrating than going to one office only to find out that you should have gone somewhere else first, you don't have everything you need or they only take applications during certain hours. Another thing that is very important in the application process is completing all forms correctly. Forms that are not completed correctly will not be able to be processed and can keep you from getting a needed service. Remember!

1. Print all information clearly and neatly. If you have poor handwriting, ask someone else to print it for you. If an agency can't read what you wrote, you won't get what you want.
2. Make sure you complete everything on the application. Turn the forms over to make sure you are not forgetting any sections.
3. If you are not sure how to answer a question on the form, ask the person responsible for application to help you. Don't try to guess or leave it blank.
Follow up on the Application

The last step to locating resources is to follow up on your application. In all cases (phone, mail, or in person) you will want to check back to the agency within a week or two to see that your application has been received and is being processed. Ask to speak to the person responsible for applications. Ask if your application has been processed and when you might expect to hear from them. Following all these steps will not guarantee you will receive the service you want, that depends on their guidelines and waiting lists. What it does is ensure that:

1. You will not be eliminated for service because of an incorrect application.
2. You will be aware of all services available to you.
3. You will not waste your efforts on services that do not meet your needs.
4. You will go through an application process with a minimum of problems.

In summary, when you find yourself in need of some advice, you will want to do the following:

1. Identify your need.
2. List all places to try to contact.
3. Call for information.
4. Evaluate what's available.
5. Choose what's best for you.
6. Apply to the programs of your choice.
7. Follow up on your application.
